"Post Hoc, Ergo Proctor Hoc"

(AP) Compelled by unknown forces, dozens of metro women show up on the doorstep of the Ramsey Lutheran Church only on the days in which Dean Lohrmann is working as an usher.

"They come in all glassy-eyed and dazed," remarked the Reverend Grant "Red" Ruffensore. "Dean says hello to them, hands them a program and they swoon before they hit the pew. It is the oddest thing I have seen in this business." After the service, the visitors peacefully file out without knowing why or how they got there. There are many theories why the church has experienced these attendance spikes but most agree that it is because of Dean Lohrmann and his boyish good looks.

"I don't care if the Rockettes show up here, as long as Dean is getting some churching," said his mother Ellen McKee. "Dean has always been a crowd favorite; his brother Mike was always better in a small group and Janee is more of a "one on one" person but if you want to light up a PTA meeting or a cock fight, Dean is still the best bet."

Rev. Ruffensore agrees, "The coffers are full after one of Dean's services so I am encouraging him to work as many Sundays as possible. In fact, my buddy Rabbi Sol Rabinowitz down at the Temple called last week to see if Dean had any problem working on Saturdays."

FAMILY RUMORS EXIST: IS THE NEWSLETTER INACCURATE?

(Faribault Daily News) "There is something rotten in Bismarck," was the muffled message on the Daily News voicemail this week, when an unidentified tipster attempted to blow the whistle on the alleged practices of the now-legendary Mom's Newsletter (MNL). One cousin (her name rhymes with Zorrie Zeyl) has been making frantic claims to the media of MNL's "widespread inaccuracy." No other family members have come forward to substantiate her claims or are willing to make any comment to investigators as they all fear the power of the first amendment.

"Leave me alone," said an anonymous Gulf War vet. "I got a new nickname (read: Little BM) because I talked to Lorrie recently. If 'he' finds out, I could get labeled with like Lil' Bowel Movement or something."

"I think MNL is a good thing," said untouchable patriarch Bing Miller. "It keeps whatshisname off the streets and out of the bars. Which is saying something especially when you take a look at all his cousins. Boy, that kid has a lot of moxie. He's my favorite nephew."
