Estrogen-Repelling Zone Discovered in Dinkytown

"It's a place women can't, won't and will not get near..."

(Dinkytown, USA) Recently NSA-sponsored surveillance activities has identified a partial city block in which estrogen-repelling energy waves are springing outward in electromagnetic pulses and causing co-eds to divert their walking patterns to avoid this social wasteland. "This is worse than the Pioneer Hall incident during the University's academic year 1974-1975," said historian Gary Lazarz. "This Dinkytown incident makes the legendary Pioneer Hall event look like a frantic Catholic school sock hop."

Famous epidemiologist and known lady's man, James Batchelder, stated due to "an anomaly, such as combination of questionable hygiene practices, glacial-like attempts at focused babe interaction and an ability to close" collided together and sent out Dave Burrows-like waves which forcibly direct young coeds around and away from this social black hole. "We need a counter-acting individual babe-focused energy source," said Batchelder, "that can act as an anti-matter to release energy and allow the inhabitants (see left) a remote chance at meeting chicks. I think we are calling babe legends Steve Ulseth or Dean Lohrmann to counteract the current situation. When asked to describe his love life, University senior John McGrory paused and said, "Mainly hypothetical."
