Charlie McGrory Sues France: "Je Suis This"

(Paris) Looking haggard and jet-lagged, an exhausted shade-wearing Charlie McGrory walked into the Paris press room and motioned to the assembled press corps to sit for a brief prepared statement.

"While I do not want to get into the recent Paris tragedy details, I am the owner of anything 'I am Charlie,' so someone, somewhere owes me some dough or d'argent or whatever you froggies call it." The crowd gasped and Charlie said, "Come on...give me my money. Chop chop, I got a lunch date."

Charlie's dream team of attorneys lead by American legal counsel and litigating legend, Patricia Weller, filed lawsuits in several key European capitals based of evident of "an overt abuse of existing trademarks and 'significant loss of royalties' generated by all the "Je Suis Charlie" and "Ich Bin Charlie" apparel and relate banners." Then Charlie then interrupted Ms. Weller, Esq. and said "Hey, write me a check for three billion Euros and I will turn my Gulfstream west and get out of here." After a brief pause, he turned around and said, "Find me some nuggets de poulet...rapide!"

MNL Wives Join CSI Viewing Clubs

DVR's Need Repair Due to "Excessive" Rewinding

(St. Paul) "Go back to the scene where they make the poison from household chemicals," whispers Barb

Goodwin. "I need to make sure I have the portions in the right order." Other female attendees quickly hand Barb over the correct formulary and the DVR is now punched forward. This scene has been re-occurring in Faribault, St. Paul and many other places in which wives of many MNL subscribers are starting up "crime watching viewing clubs" to pass the time.

"It is nothing about how to commit the perfect murder," said main organizer Sonja Dapper as she finishes highlighting a flow chart complete with time schedules and a list of hardware stores without any surveillance cameras near the interstate. "This is a way for many of us to get together, drink tea and catch up on the latest woman gossip."

Standing in front of her white board listing the "seven ways to kill without evidence," Lorrie Beyl says the "clubs are a great way to reconnect with family and friends" and was very pleased from the recent utensil exchange get-together held in the basement bathroom at the V.F.W. "I traded with Janee Dame for two Tasers®, Stella Press for a functioning claymore mine and Karen Ayre for a garrote and three bricks of C4. It was such fun and Colleen Johnson made the greatest peanut butter bars."
