

Le Mans "Disappointing" for McGrory Team

Driving Proved to be Easiest Piece of Racing Puzzle

(Le Mans) As many family members know, the 24 Hours of Le Mans is the world's oldest active endurance sports car race. What made this year's race special was the addition of the McGrory Family Racing Team. While hopes were high, the team finished in ninth place due to a high number of delays during the switching of drivers. "We raced just fine," said team captain Andy McGrory, "but Mom spent so much time kissing us goodbye that we were being passed left and right by those assholes from Ferrari and Lotus."

The crowd was audibly incensed when they saw Liz constantly grabbing either Andy or Charlie at each switchover. "The mama was crazy," sobbed racing fan Larry Wendt,

"the boys drove great, but it was always kiss, kiss and kiss in the pits."

Liz was added to the team for her unique ability to patiently work through traffic slowdowns and crashes on the track. "To tell you the truth, I enjoy when everyone is driving slow, so I can just look out the cockpit and see the other drivers and toss a wave or a quick 'yoo-hoo' before the next hairpin turn or pit stop." When asked why she joined, she said "I thought they said the 24 grueling hours of Lamaze and my lady garden has tons of war stories from those years. No one has been through more except Rae Rae."

The family is planning to return to France next year with a new car and possible driver changes. "John's head is too large to fit into a standard helmet," said Andy, "and Jeff's eyeballs are not what they used to be. So, we have expanded the search to the second cousins. Billy used to drive moonshine for Lorrie, so he is on the short list and seems not too huggy-kissy which would be great."

Border Wall with Wisconsin Proposed

Well, We Don't See Lorrie That Often Anyway

(Sun Prairie) The Mom's Newsletter Immigration and Planning Commission has proposed a border wall with Wisconsin due to Lorrie's reluctance in attending family reunions. "I am a busy gal and there are plenty of McMichael women who can easily stand in for me," said the chestnut-haired mother of two. "If Mike shows up or Billy's ear does something interesting, I will be there but if it is just Broaster™ chicken and trampoline boxing, I will pass."

Family members and insiders are taking the border wall talk in stride. "It is like the 1999 banishment of Derek Sayres and Don Smith (wedding dance incident) or the full shunning of Curt Breeding (pouring of low quality bourbon) in 2010.

"Except for the actual physical building of the wall," said family historian Elizabeth "Betty" Kenow. "If I am a betting woman, and I am, this too will eventually pass. This is not a family that holds grudges for more than a century. Hardly anyone brings up the missing wedding thank you notes anymore."

While tensions are at a historical high, a visit to Bingstock and a vat of apple crisp would go a long way to reduce tensions. "Stay tuned," said Betty Kenow. Either way, the first panels are planned for placement in 2019.

A Visit to Uncle Bing's Favorite Punchlines:

- "If I can find my keys, we can drive out."
- "I am not sure what it is, but it seems to be eating my popcorn."
- "Bohpus?"
- "Bent it? Hell. I think I broke it."
- "People might think they were dancing..."
