

Top Ten News Bits from the Family

- 1 Twins are in first place, Janer must be pleased.
- 2 Some co-habitation rumors beginning to circulate.
- 3 John's chemo going well, head still fuzzy.
- 4 No federal charges stick against Janee. Congrats!
- 5 Dean will weld. Oh, he will weld.
- 6 Maggie has been home only 4 hours this summer.
- 7 Mike Lohrmann remains hidden from press. No interviews scheduled.
- 8 Uncle Bing has birthday and continues to enjoy "little brother status."
- 9 Aunt Lorraine has formulated several new opinions on things.
- 10 Boysen snake charmer skills continue to woo Joanie. Pope concerned.

Mom's Newsletter can be found at:
www.clydepark.com

"Mike Lohrmann called, I have a sitting arranged."

Mom's Newsletter

"Happy B-day to Ellen & Bing"

McGrory Children Flown to Moscow for Potential Relocation "Spymasters Love Their Stuff" By Yakov Smirnoff

Thanks to glowing reports coming out of southeastern Minnesota about a trio of self-taught interrogators who can crack even the most hardened spy, the Russian Government flew the entire McGrory family to Moscow for the purposes of recruiting the young boys for their "Future Spy Program."

"These boys have no quit in them," said Col. Dimitri "The Fox" Federov. "We saw them crack a twenty-year KGB veteran within a few minutes. The two big ones went right at him and the little one started making a series of brain-stem rattling screams. The combat-hardened veteran of four land wars and countless secret missions only lasted about ninety seconds before he started babbling out secret nuclear launch codes."

"Our Russian hosts were very nice," said mother Liz McGrory, "they showed us around the city and even arranged for a private meeting with some of the other spy family gals, But we wanted to get back home early due to the Goodview parade. I heard that it was going to be a doozy." The two older boys spent most of their vacation spitting on pedestrians thirty-five floors below their palatial hotel suite while Mark spent the day at the newly opened Moscow Merchants National Bank. "It's a beauty, Comrade," said Mark.

(Little) Billy, Andy and Jimmy Hit Edgefest.

Shunned for looking "too normal"

By John Rotten

The pride of the entire Miller family descended on Western Wisconsin for a music festival that encouraged our dear relatives the opportunity to "embrace the strange." Decked out in a wide variety of hair coloration, (Little) Billy, Andy Mueller and Jimmy "I am Higher Education" Liversed hit the local Edgefest/Ozfest/Wierdassfest and all of them declared it a victory for their First Amendment rights.

The boys, (see picture at upper right) got a chance to add to the impressive family legacy of non-traditional road trips. "I am so tired of Grandma cracking wise about her summer with Jack Kerouac and all the members of the Cuban National Baseball team," said (Little) Billy Miller. "We all decided to make some history of our own and at least have it replacing the day that my dad, Jack, rode the cow out at French Lake."