John McKee Hospitalized "Still Good-Looking"

By Pat McGroin, Male R.N.

John McKee, husband of Ellen, has recently been hospitalized at Unity Hospital in Fridley with some tricky form of leukemia. Cards can be sent to:

No Wooden Ducks...Please

"The ward hosting Mr. John McKee is strictly off-limits to wooden ducks," said Dr. Harold Organs. "In fact, we have determined that we're not too nuts about wooden duck carvers or guys that like to work with duck-sized bits of wood." When asked why, Dr. Organ paused and said, "Did you meet John? He is very clean and the sawdust would eat him alive."

Doctors Mayo Dug Up, Consulting

In efforts to help her brother, Mary McKee has successfully brought the brothers Mayo back to life to assist on the case. "It wasn't that hard, I still have my generator and I took a quick visit down to Rochester. I dug them up, blew the dust off them, gave each about ten thousand volts, told them "it was the year 2001 and they better get their asses up to Fridley."

Next Steps?

It's rare to describe a family member as "indisposed for the time" without the words "jail sentence" attached to it. John will be at Unity likely through the month of March, then home.

February Was A Weird Month: Week at a Glance

By Roger Bongers

Week One: Things were quiet. The week after Joanie's Birthday is usually a restful time. Most of the TV crews have left and there are only a few hard-core fans that loom around Faribault. Liz's kids are still a handful with young John McGrory destined for sainthood. Aunt Lorraine has a few medical challenges ("nothing I can't handle kiddo!") and all is under control with Dean.

Week Two: No major events in the pre-Valentine, pre-Patti and Aunt Lorraine Birthday festival events. Joanie is doing a lot of smiling and Uncle Bing is Uncle Bing. No bad reports from Winona, Bloomington, Guam or Berlin. John complains about something but not enough to do anything about it.

Week Three: Valentine's Day comes and goes; no cousin is contacting Mike Dapper and reports about Dean and Mike are good. Janee continues to be a wonderful sister and Maggie has a run-in with the hotel security manager for allegedly mooning. As usual, no one is convicted.

Week Four: All hell breaks loose. John goes to the Hospital; Joanie announces the Mike Boysen and Little Billy Miller is still scratching his head. March comes in like a Lion and looks to be an interesting month. When reached about his reaction about all the comings and goings, Jack Miller said, "I have asked (nicely) many times for more stories about Guam." To quote Jane Sears, "It is always something."
