

Mom's Newsletter

March 2011 "Res nolunt diu male administrari" Volume 24, Number 1

Protesters Overturn MNL Dictatorial Editors; Mom's Newsletter To Be Published "Soon, Comrade..."

(AP) Tired demonstrators assembled around the First District Court House to celebrate their "first day of freedom." This was the result of the midnight departure of the Newsletter Dictator and Editor in Chief, Michael Felix-Dapper, escape exile. Run for twenty-four years under his iron but smallish fist, Mom's Newsletter was immediately turned over to the Rice County crowds and re-named "The People's Paper" by the exhausted crowd.

The protest leaders, Cindi Ramm (with bongo) and Joan Boysen are seen celebrating the fall of the old regime and the bright new day of journalistic freedom. "The old ways are now gone forever," said Cindi. "No more tired articles about Little Billy Miller or what Roger Bongers thinks about when he wakes up. It took a whole year to bring down this travesty of a newspaper and is time for a renaissance; such more articles about southern cooking, art crawls and chick racquetball."

"I second what my sister-in-protest Cindi says," said Joanie. "I have been suffering under the old Newsletter regime for the last 24 years even since Maggie was born. I have been mocked, ridiculed and photo-shopped within an inch of my life, but not once has anyone asked me about my true love: stock car racing. Time to start our literary engines!"

Lorrie Beyl Indicted in Knit Hat Pleasant Manor Sweat Shop Busted by Excessive Yarn and Acetaminophen Purchases

(AARP) "I was framed," screamed Lorrie Beyl as she was thrown behind bars (see photo taken moments before the arrest) in which she was charged with running a disorderly knitting sweat shop in Faribault. In files recently released, she is been accused of forcing large groups of elderly women, several against their will, into knitting sessions to satisfy the insatiable desire for hand-knit homemade hats. The report also stated that Lorrie had an inside partner, who added face to face pressure for the ladies to produce. Known as "AL," AL would terrorize knitters with threats of disapproving looks and Catholic guilt.

Authorities were tipped off after Lorrie was seen making excessive yarn purchases, sometimes exceeding thirty skeins a week as well as significant Tylenol purchases to reduce hand cramping as a result of forcing around the clock production. "She ran a tight ship," remarked the arresting officer, "no hat got stitched without her okay...and her orders were carried out with an iron fist, wrapped up in soft, comfortable acrylics."

Worst Selling Girl Scout Cookies:

- Dixeans
- Lil' BM's
- Herring Surprise
- Prune Shingles
- Teske n' Creams
- Vizsla Bits
- Mabel Pabelles
- Andy's Brownie
- St. O-loafs

