"What DID Cinderella Say When She Got To The Ball?"

March 2018

Liz First Ballot Hall of Famer

"Many Go to Bakeries, A Rare Few Understand"

(Radio Roll Lane) The call came early and before the news trucks could assemble on her lawn, Liz McGrory became a rare first ballot hall of fame member of the United States Sweetroll Association (USSA). Once social media caught up, Liz was inundated by congratulatory good wishes from baked good fans and frosting companies across the globe.

"I remember her well growing up," said Allen Dusek, "she had a rare, once-in-a-lifetime ability to scan the baking racks and call out her order, usually a corner piece, from the front door from sixty feet away." While the scene is littered with good but not great sweet rollers, like Cate DeLaRosa (nee Condon) and Deb Thar but the USSA press release separates the good from the great as it states Liz is a "a generational master of all things sweet and crunchy."

"I am honored to be recognized by the USSA," said Liz, a fortyish mother of three, "And getting kudos from my peers and baking industry professionals, literally and figuratively, takes the cake." Her press release went on with a final quote stating, "I have been dreaming about this day ever since I saw frosting in a can and determined that a small-town Minnesota gal can do and consume anything they put their mind to do."

Super Bowl Chooses Miller Farm

NFL eyes up Billy and Amy's Farm for Super Bowl LXII

(Frozen Tundra) As the crowds headed for the Minneapolis airport, raving about the recent cold weather success of Super Bowl LII NFL offices confirmed that they are planning on coming back to Minnesota for Super Bowl

LXII, provided that "Billy can build us a stadium" somewhere north of the Faribault Airport.

"I figure it can be done," said Billy. "I will have to clear it with Amy as she wants me to make a new castle first. The one on the east side has too much of a medieval vibe, which really scares the steer at night." Amy said, "Billy and Buster started watching Game of Thrones and now he is afraid of dark shadows. I told Billy that he only enjoys romantic comedies." Billy whispered, "And I will need a few more pallets to do it right."

Family members are not surprised that Billy got the Super Bowl. "I sent in a postcard to the NFL," said Geraldine Anderson, "and told them I was Billy and that I wanted to try building a stadium and he got the Super Bowl in 2027 or 2028. So, we have something fun to use later for family get-togethers." The national media were taken by surprise with the selection but after a few hours of research seemed to be okay with it. "I do not think a chicken theme will be enough to make it success," said retired journalist Mike Dapper, "but what the hell do I know? I also was positive that Grand Funk Railroad was going to be a big deal."
