Mary McKee Interviewed in Baghdad

"Mashed Potatoes Listed as WMD"

(Al Jeereza News Service) Hans Blix announced today that the mashed potatoes made (in) famous by Mary McKee at the 2002 Thanksgiving fête have tested positive for both biological and chemical toxins and are considered a "weapon of mass destruction."

Mary and her new boyfriend, Stan Hussen, met the media to vehemently deny the connection between the unique tasting potatoes and any known chemical agent.

"When I told them that I used a little Turkish pepper and mustard seed, they all went for their gas masks," sighed the former first lady.

"I kept screaming 'mustard seed' and they would scream back through their masks 'mustard gas?' and we finally agreed to disagree."

Mary's beau Stan kept his arm around her for the entire interview. "I want to emphasize that Mary's potatoes have only trace amounts of Serin and VX gases, and those were there to add just a little flavor along with the paprika." The UN inspectors isolated the potatoes and flew them back to an undisclosed facility in the Upper Peninsula for further testing. "These things are sending my Geiger counter through the roof," said an inspector, "This stuff has a mind of its own."

COLLEGE TIPS FROM DAVID LIVERSEED:

1. Studying is extremely overrated. Trust your gut feelings on tests or just make things up! That is what my cousin Jeff did!
2. Women love English accents! Start working on yours immediately!
3. If you are ever arrested, try charming the police with your newly developed English accent. Jolly Good!
4. Never let your cousin Billy visit you without a thorough frisking.
5. Naps are a powerful study aid; take one with your book open. It's magic!
