

November 2001
Volume 15, No. 5

1

Faribault Daily News says white dress is "a gutsy move by a gutsy gal."

2

New Market renames their main drag, "Cecilia Street"

3

Mike Dapper shows up; heard "there was a dance or something."

4

Chart House reviews contract several times, Can't find an out clause.

5

Jeff and Uncle Bing point out that they are actually registered Episcopalians.

6

Demand for ring-bearing Vizsla largely ignored by bride and groom.

7

Mike Lohrmann stays home; truly grateful for non-invitation.

8

(Little) Billy Miller enjoys wedding. Grandpa's dance lessons finally pay off.

9

Jeff didn't soil himself, like other Miller weddings.

10

Fiction ties Fact again in October, fiction solidifies lead for 2001.

Mom's Newsletter on the Web:
www.clydepark.com

Mike Lohrmann, Comedian

"So he says, 'Put in on my bill,' Get it?"

Mom's Newsletter

McKee Thanksgiving Marred by Food Fight & Fire Marshal by: E.F. Warren

Ellen's annual Thanksgiving Bash was marred by two horrifying incidents this year, making it the most memorable Ramsey event since 1995. To enlighten new subscribers, the '95 Thanksgiving was the time when the entire family was served federal indictments before the turkey was carved. However, this year's get together surpassed 1995 when the fire marshal walked into the house and declared to the approximate one hundred attendees that "the house was four times over population capacity" and people were entering it just like a "little clown car."

Once the city official was paid off, it looked like things were finally getting back to normal when the food fight ironically began at the north end of table thirteen, section three. "It all started with an innocent comment about concealed weapons," said Dean. "One minute I am making a point about the second amendment and all of a sudden, Janee throws mashed potatoes at my head." (see picture at right). "Once the mashed potatoes erupted at table thirteen," said Andy McGrory, "I sent a few fistfuls of yams down the aisle just for giggles."

The main food fight lasted only about fifteen minutes but there were skirmishes still going on at some of the outlying tables for the rest of the afternoon. "As long as I green beans," said an unidentified cousin, "I really don't care too much about the rest of the meal, no matter how tasty."

Boysen-Miller Nuptials Snarl Traffic, Jams 35W by Barney Olfield

The friendly piece of highway between Faribault and all points north was jammed for several hours due to the mass exodus of wedding attendees leaving for the Boysen-Miller reception in Lakeville. "There were sure a lot of cars headed up the road," said Highway Patrol officer Harold "Snapper" Organs.

"It all began when Joanie started waving over truckers and inviting them to the wedding," said an unidentified cousin. "A few of them did join us once we convinced them that gifts were optional." Joanie and her new friends (see picture), joined the rest of the group for a night of dancing and low-level cavorting that lasted well into the ten o'clock hour.

Large portions of the caravan was also delayed when the lead car, piloted by Desert Storm veteran (Little) Billy Miller and his grandfather, US Navy legend William (Ding) Miller took an unauthorized exit on trunk highway 19. "Grandpa thought there was a VFW near Little Chicago," said (L)BM. "We thought we would take a quick look around but we couldn't find it."

